The International Society for Quality in Healthcare (ISQua) is an independent nonprofit organization with members and links to healthcare leaders in more than 100 countries. ISQua works to provide services to guide health professionals, providers, researchers, agencies, policy makers and consumers to achieve excellence in healthcare delivery to all people, and to continuously improve the safety and quality of care. ISQua is formally recognized as being officially related to the World Health Organization.

ISQua’s 26th International Conference will be held in Dublin, Ireland, from Oct. 11 to Oct. 14, 2009. To register or for more information, please visit <http://www.isqua.org/CurrentConference.aspx?men=41>.

For many leaders and decision-makers in healthcare, each ISQua conference has become an important annual “must attend” quality forum on the international calendar.

With the “Designing for Quality” theme, the 2009 conference program in Dublin is being promoted to a target audience across the world of healthcare policy makers, economists and regulators, accreditors, other external evaluation, peer reviews and quality improvement organizations, planners, researchers, educators, professionals, managers, practitioners, providers and patients and their representatives.
